

Person-Directed Planning Children & Youth

What is person-directed planning?

Person-directed planning can assist children and youth with developmental disabilities to set goals and find community connections, services and/or supports with the help of their families and/or significant others of their choice.

For example:

- Identifying abilities and interests
- Making connections to social and recreational activities
- Enhancing independence skills
- Finding volunteer, employment and/or educational opportunities (if appropriate)

The focus of planning is based on the goals people set.

Person-Directed Planning

How much does it cost?

It is free.

Does planning affect eligibility for other supports?

No, planning can enhance future supports and help to plan for them.
